Stephenson Way Play Area, Corby

Funded by the FCC Communities Foundation and Corby Borough Council, this playground was designed around a space theme... Countdown to read more now... 3... 2... 1... Blast Off!

Corby's Claim to Fame

The playground is space-themed as one of Corby's claims to fame is that it has its very own crater on Mars named after it! Legend has it this was so named due to Corby playing host to the 1969 World Porridge Championships and porridge fan Buzz Aldrin being told the results of this contest while on his mission to the moon!

Completion during the CoVid Pandemic

This project was completed during the CoVid pandemic, which was challenging, due to additional restrictions. Rachel Ritchie, Leisure Manager from Corby Borough Council, praised HAGS for being able to adapt and complete the project within the council's new timescales. "HAGS also worked with us to make additional alterations to the design which further enhanced the play value for the community."

Innovative play equipment that will benefit the community for years to come

"The HAGS team are approachable, professional and highly knowledgeable. They went out of their way to resolve issues and answer any questions we had with the project and were always available to talk to!

Thank you for installing this new, innovative, colourful and creative play equipment at Stephenson Way. This project will provide children, young people and families of Corby with an exciting and fun new play provision that will benefit the local community for many years to come!"
